Dear Mainak,

Thank you for your thoughtful response. It is truly an honor to connect with a filmmaker of your caliber.

Your films, such as Dialogue and Dida's Room, have left a profound impression on us. Dialogue masterfully portrays the complexity of human relationships, offering audiences a deep and thought-provoking narrative. Meanwhile, Dida's Room is an evocative exploration of memory, nostalgia, and familial bonds, resonating universally while maintaining its distinct cultural identity.

These exceptional works are exactly the kind of cinematic gems we wish to celebrate at the Sterling International Cine Carnival. Our festival seeks to honor films that inspire, provoke thought, and spark meaningful conversations, and your work perfectly embodies these values.

We would be thrilled to showcase your creations and share their brilliance with our audience. Please feel free to let us know how we can support you in bringing your films to our festival.

Looking forward to your reply and to celebrating your artistic contributions.

Warm regards,
Rupanjali

What I liked most about the short was that the phrases and images are very well thought out and that at no point can you interpret that something is missing or that something is superfluous. A very strong discourse both visually and audibly. I like the line that separates what we see that is present and what we hear that in theory should be observed but is only the idea of what should be.

Very commendable stylistic choices, certainly something I don't think I've seen before. I thought the artifice of the VO juxtaposed with the characters' actions was very interesting, and how this relates to the ending definitely gave me a lot of food for thought (pun intended). This will certainly stay with me.

Curiously, it reminded me of meetings at work where, regardless of whether the bosses show their faces or not, we always end up feeling that their presence is blurred, unclear due to the distance we keep in the work relationship. I find the manipulation of the voice interesting because at some point while we are listening in a meeting, the voice simply fades away little by little as we lose our attention, and also the desperate breathing that shows us the desperate side of the employees. I liked the resources that the director used.

The kind of avant-garde, tone poem that I'm sure a lot of people will find impenetrable. A meditation on perspective, perhaps? I thought the use of extreme close-up that makes the image completely unintelligible, contrasted with he ending shot, which is essentially a Birds Eye view of the what we've just been seeing, was definitely interesting. I think this will sit with me for a while.

Subject: Jury for short film festival

Dear Mainak

We would like to propose you to participate at the jury of the next edition of our festival : Les Films de la Toiles. It's a little festival organize by students of the university Paris 8 in France.

We would like you to be a member of the jury, because we especially appreciated your work on the image that you made on your animated film (we saw the brave on film freeway). This look seems very important to us.

All the deliberations are made by internet. Every member of the jury will vote for his movie preferred for the various 3 categories :

- Best film
- Award for originality
- Award for humour

Can you send me your 2 best choises for the 3 categories ?
You will find the screening link below.
There's 4 movies. You need only 30 minutes to see the movies.
We need your votes before the 30 october.

Sorry, some directors don't sent the movie with subtitles.
We hope that you will accept this invitation.

Best regards,
Édouard Martin

Dear Mainak,

I'm James, Programming Director at the Liverpool Indie Awards.

We're on the lookout for the best projects for our festival here in the UK, and Death caught our attention.

We send invitations exclusively to filmmakers and in private. So please take this offer as a compliment for the work you and your team have done so far.

We'd like to offer you a WAIVER CODE for submitting through our partner FilmFreeway:
65% OFF CODE: YOURFINAL65
Link: FilmFreeway - Liverpool Indie Awards

This is your chance to be a laureate who walks the red carpet and screens your film in the UK during our gala evening.

By the way, here's a short video from our last Gala—it's an unforgettable celebration of creativity.
I'd love to see your film join us this year!

Best regards,
James Derryl from Liverpool Indie Awards

Dear Mainak,

Your films—Dialogue, Dida's Room, Solitaire, and They Are Coming—each embody a unique and thought-provoking narrative, capturing the audience's imagination with authenticity and depth.

At the Calcutta Film Competition, we are committed to celebrating the art of storytelling and the voices behind them. Your remarkable works resonate deeply with our vision of fostering creative expression and bringing diverse cinematic perspectives to life.

We would be honored to have your films as part of our upcoming season. This platform not only offers an opportunity to showcase your art but also connects you with fellow filmmakers and audiences who share a profound love for cinema.

Submit your films today and let us celebrate your creativity together. If you have any questions or need assistance, feel free to reach out—we're here to help!

Let's bring your stories to the world.

Warm regards,
Ayush

This is pretty visceral. Once the meowing cuts off with a scream, its pretty shocking. The handheld lo-fi camera only solidifies those vibes. You make work that brings up just the right amount of questions.

This is a film that defies easy interpretation—or, in my case, any interpretation at all. But that's not necessarily a bad thing! With its stark black-and-white imagery, haunting sound design, and dreamlike pacing, it creates an atmosphere that lingers. If you're a fan of David Lynch, I am sure you have made him proud, wherever Mr. Lynch is now that he's no longer with us.

I won't pretend I understood it, but I admire the commitment to pure experimentation. There's a confidence in the abstraction, a willingness to embrace the strange, and that alone is worth celebrating. I look forward to seeing where this filmmaker's vision takes them next—because whether I "get it" or not, it's beside the point.

Joe Shelleh 9 HOURS AGO

This feels like a raw, unflinching short film that doesn't just depict suicidal ideation—it feels like a window into someone's pain. The filmmaker's vulnerability is palpable, and while the artistry is undeniable, the most pressing takeaway isn't about cinematography or storytelling—it's about them. The title is what does the heavy lifting here, as the film itself is rather abstract and nebulous without it. A curious element to be sure, as most of the time titles don't play such a crucial role in the understanding of the film itself.

This film isn't just a piece of work; it's a person reaching out, and that's what matters most. If the filmmaker sees this, I just want to say: Your voice is important. You are important. I hope you have people around you who remind you of that, and if not, I hope you find them. The world is better with you in it. And please, keep making films.
